4. Assessment Procedures

There was a mixed response from internal examiners as to the external examiners comments during the proof reading stage. Our general feeling was that some of the concerns were not addressed and ultimately led to several questions being withdrawn.

We will ensure that all comments and amendments suggested by external examiners are acted upon in preparation of the final version of the paper or an explanation fed-back to the external examiner.

likely to have skewed the overall results. The internal examiners need to critically look at these questions and the corresponding teaching. Some of these questions were moderated as a result. There is always a disparity in overall marks with MCQs being answered better than EMQs but this year it was particularly marked. Some of this will reflect the stage the students are at in their teaching i.e. pre-to the external examiners were very helpful in this respect. Some EMQs seem to fit more of the MCQ format and again internal examiners should try and rework these questions. This year the EMQ fail rate seems particularly high unlike in previous years where the opposite has been the case.

4. Assessment Procedures

Please comment, as appropriate, on:

- 4.1 the administration of the examinations, e.g. time available for marking and moderation
- 4.2 arrangements for marking
- 4.3 procedures followed by the Board of Examiners
- 4.4 the participation of External Examiners in the process
- 4.5 adequacy of External Examiners' briefing
- 4.6 comparison with previous years in which you have examined

Administration of the exam process is good and runs smoothly. Computer marking provides a convenient and accurate method of marking a large number of scripts and the statistics generated are very useful in post-hoc evaluation.
