

FLEXIBLE WORKING GUIDE

This guide provides useful information about flexible working at the Royal Veterinary College (RVC) and the statutory procedure to be followed when making an application for flexible working under the Employment Relations (Flexible Working) Act 2023.

The guide does not form part of your contract of employment and we may amend it from time to time, subject to consultation with recognised trade unions.

This guide applies to employees only.

1 INTRODUCTION

- 1.1 Flexible working is a provision that can enable employees to adjust, by agreement with their manager, the balance between home and work responsibilities, subject to operational and business needs. The RVC recognises that a good balance between work and other priorities such as longer-term caring responsibilities, leisure activities, further learning and other interests can improve employee motivation, performance and productivity and reduce stress.

2 FLEXIBLE WORKING PRINCIPLES

To support and promote flexible working, the RVC has agreed the following set of core principles:

Flexible working should be mutually agreed between the employee and the employer.

Those working flexibly and/or making a request for flexible working will not be subjected to any detriment or face any barrier to career progression.

Consideration of the option to work flexibly will be given during both employment and recruitment.

Our commitment to flexible working will be explicitly stated in job advertisements.

All employees will be entitled to make a case for working flexibly, but there will be situations where a specific arrangement will not work because of RVC's commitments to achieving its strategic objectives.

Where an application for flexible working is declined, an explanation will be provided.

Responsibility for effective flexible working will be shared by employees and managers. Together they will assess opportunities and challenges in any proposed arrangement openly and honestly.

If the employee agrees, flexible working arrangements may be offered for a trial period and then reviewed.

3 TYPES OF FLEXIBLE WORKING

- 3.1 The RVC will consider requests for various types of flexible working including changing the hours worked and the times an employee is required to be at work.
- 3.2 Flexible working involves consideration of 'when' people work, 'where' people work and 'how' people work. Options for flexible working may include part-time, job sharing, term-time working, changes to the days and/or times of work or compressed hours. This guide provides information on how to make an application to change working arrangements.
- 3.3 Whilst a request to work from home may be part of a request for flexible working under this guide, if an employee wishes to make an application to work from home that is not a statutory flexible working request, they should apply through the RVC's 'Working from Home Programme' and 'Homeworking Policy'. This guide should therefore be read in conjunction with the RVC's 'Working from Home Programme' and 'Homeworking Policy,' which specifically sets out how the 5.3 Following receipt, Human Resources will send an employee's application to their line manager, who will consider whether it is possible to make the changes requested. Managers must not reject a request without first consulting the employee. Unless the manager decides to agree to the employee's written request in full, they must consult the employee before they make a decision. In such cases, the manager will invite the employee to a consultation meeting to discuss the request as set out below.

5.4 If an employee seeks a reasonable adjustment for their disability through a request for flexible working, their line manager will consider this in line with RVC's legal obligations under the Equality Act 2010. The legal obligation to make reasonable adjustments is separate to the legal obligation to consider a request for flexible working and will involve a review process such as Access to Work or an Occupational Health Review.

6 CONSIDERING A REQUEST FOR FLEXIBLE WORKING

6.1 Line managers will handle every request in a reasonable manner. This will include carefully assessing the effect of the requested change for both the RVC and the employee, such as the potential benefits or other impacts of accepting or rejecting it.

6.2 Managers will agree to a flexible working request unless there is a genuine business reason not to. A decision to reject a request will be for one or more of the following business reasons which are set out in the Employment Rights Act 1996:

the burden of additional costs.

an inability to reorganise work fairly amongst existing staff.

- 9.2 A further meeting will be held to discuss the appeal, to which the employee may bring a colleague or trade union representative, if they wish.
- 9.3 Once the appeal hearing has taken place the RVC will write to the employee confirming the decision of the appeal, including reasons. The outcome of the appeal will be final.
- 10 IF THE EMPLOYEE DOES NOT ATTEND A MEETING TO DISCUSS FLEXIBLE WORKING OR AN APPEAL
- 10.1 A manager's arrangements for a meeting to discuss flexible working should provide a reasonable opportunity for the employee to attend.
- 10.2 If a meeting is arranged to discuss the application, including any appeal, the employee fails to attend this, and a re-arranged meeting without good reason, the RVC will consider the request withdrawn.
- 10.3 If the manager does consider the request withdrawn, Human Resources will inform the employee of this in writing.
- 10.4 Any questions regarding this guide should be addressed to line managers or the Employee Relations Manager.
